

Moorland

Heather

Grouse

Natural fires once helped shape the patchwork of moorland and forest. But uncontrolled fires can burn deep into the peat, releasing huge quantities of carbon. Muirburn – a traditional management technique – uses closely managed fires to burn off older, woody growth. This reduces the threat of a major fire, as well as creating a good mix of different aged plants for the grouse.